

IS GERMANY HUNGRY?

(Philadelphia Public Ledger)

Official denials from Germany that the recent orders regarding the food supply signify an actual scarcity are not altogether convincing. It may be merely the part of wisdom to restrict consumption rather severely. But such a course is certain to arouse discontent, and a government would hardly venture upon it were it not imperative. If, as is said, the means of subsistence for the civilian population are just as abundant as they have been for the last 14 months, why should such rigid rules be promulgated? The excuse for the Zeppelin raids on England has been that an attempt to starve Germany was being made by the blockade of the German ports; a "hunger war" the Germans call it. Since the cutting off of the enemy's supplies has always been regarded as a legitimate feature of warfare, the extremity of the bitterness against the blockade suggests that in this case the work has been done successfully. If the British submarines have really gained that control of the Baltic which is credited to them, so that intercourse with Sweden is seriously interrupted, there might easily be something approaching famine among large classes of the German people. The reference to the potato reop is not reassuring.

There is, moreover, direct evidence that the situation is more alarming than the German government would have the world believe. Why the newspapers are allowed under a strict censorship to reveal the facts so frankly is something of a mystery. But when the Frankfurter Zeitung says that "the sinister aspect of things certainly provides no food for laughter," and explains the growing hatred of England by this fact when Maximilian Harden of Zukunft admits that the German people are in distress, all the explanations of mere providence for future needs have a hollow sound. "Can we hold out?" asks the Neue Zeitung of Strassburg. Such a question must strike a chill to a nation which has been told again and again that defeat is impossible. Of what avail is it to hold the western front, to endeavor to force a road to Constantinople, if a ring of enemies can keep all supplies out of Germany itself? It is futile to boast of military victories, to talk of Moltkeism versus Mahanism, while the great storehouses of the neutral nations are barred by the sea power of the enemy.

Since the efforts of Germany to win by a rapid stroke came to nothing, it has been plain that the war was likely to be one of endurance. It was therefore, a sound strategy to make every German advance costly in men and at the same time to sweep Germany commerce from the seas. It has been said an army marches on its belly. There are no indications so far of any failure of supplies, either food or ammunition, for the German army. But it cannot be fed while the people starve. Such a policy, if the government were inhumane enough to pursue it, would mean revolution. Unless, therefore, the cries of distress that now come from Germany are insincere, which is hardly a reasonable supposition, the country is now in a perilous condition—one that must have a great, perhaps a determining, influence upon the military situation in the near future.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years'

Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good.

I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles when I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it.

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlasting tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

Have your tires been 99% satisfactory during the past two years?

If in 1914 and 1915 you have used ten tires and one has "gone bad," you have only been 90% satisfied. If two have "gone bad," your score is reduced to 80%.

In 1914 and 1915, out of every million Diamond Squeegies Tread Tires, 990,000, or 99% have made good.

Was your percentage that high?

If nine friends and yourself had between you, in 1914 and 1915, bought 100 Diamond Squeegies for your cars, but one tire out of the whole lot would have required adjusting.

If it takes you 15 years to use up 100 tires yourself, in all those years only one Diamond Squeegie will cause you any trouble.

These are facts based on the law of averages—upon which billions are invested in the life insurance business.

Start using Diamond Squeegies. You can't beat "99% satisfaction" in the tire business.
